VERSATILITY NEWS

Joanne Williamson • balgrae@ix.netcom.com

New AKC titling opportunities are on the horizon in several areas: Nosework, Trick training and Rally. The full details are not available yet but AKC will be launching its own titling program in Nosework and there will be two new classes and a Championship title to be offered in Rally. The effective date for the changes to the Rally program is December 1, 2017.

Please note as of January 1, only the rules adopted by the board in 2016 will be used to determine eligibility for versatility awards. To earn a VA, a Beardie must have 5 titles in at least three of the 8 venues recognized (agility, conformation, herding, miscellaneous, obedience, rally, therapy, tracking). To earn a VX, a Beardie must have 10 or more titles earned from 4 or more venues and 2 or more titles in 3 of the venues explored; no more than 5 titles can counted from any one venue.

It appears I missed a VA award winner in the December New Titles report.

Cynamen Heart N Sol RN PT NAP completed his VA when he received his RN on December 9, 2016. He is owned by Darlene & Paul Foley.

Seven teams completed versatility awards with titles earned in January, 2017. Those completing their VA are:

Linus RE OA OAJ AJP CGC, owned by Karen Deitke

Winterlyn Polar Storm BN THDN CGCA CGCU, owned by Judy Thrift

GCHS Woodsong Pandemonium BN RN CGC, owned by Robert & JoAnn Morris and Olivia Lazarus & Norm Lazarus

Those completing their VX are:

NADAC, AGILITY'S BEST KEPT SECRET

Nancy May

On a recent weekend competing at a NADAC trial in New York, I had the opportunity to participate with my oldest dog (14+ year old Farley who has a NATCH3 and a V-NATCH, qualified twice for the NADAC Championships and went out once to compete at the Champs), and my youngest dog (not yet 2-year-old Wryly who has almost no NADAC Qs at all) in an event called Barrelers—a course comprised only of hoops, tunnels and barrels. Farley ran in the Novice level and Wryly in the Intro level. Farley's greatest joy in agility has become running this event which he does with fair speed for an old guy (a Q/1 in 4.5 YPS both rounds). Wryly trains with barrels at home, but had never competed in this event before. He had a Q/1 in one of his two rounds with a time of 14.6 seconds (6.7 YPS) and also loved the event. What delight it gave me to have both my old guy and the wild new boy both enthusiastically playing this game called agility with me.

What you tend to hear from people who do not compete in NADAC (if NADAC makes it into an agility conversation at all) is that "NADAC makes too many changes". Well, last time I checked, virtually all the other agility venues in the United States just finally abandoned the closed tunnel ("chute") as a really bad idea, CPE also decided that it is still agility without a tire jump on the course and USDAA is in yet another round of making new decisions about jump heights. Agility organizations make changes. Sometimes competitors like the changes, sometimes they don't, but changes are not always or necessarily evil and should not, in isolation, be a reason to avoid what a particular agility organization has to offer. Does NADAC offer some classes unfamiliar to those who compete in the more traditional agility organizations? Sure, and most of them are fun, provide opportunities for older dogs to continue to safely compete and provide excellent opportunities for building team skills between the handler and a young dog just starting out in agility.

NADAC has a lot to offer: Want to run your 14-year-old Beardie at a low jump height on a fairly short course—no problem. Farley once jumped at 20", but as a senior citizen he can only compete as a "Skilled Veteran" at a 12" jump height and in Novice the course is probably under 16 obstacles--Farley loves it still and virtually always gets a Q. Want to push your fit young dog on a challenging course? Run him in Elite Jumpers with a very tight SCT at 20" over a 20+ obstacle Jumpers course and see if you have any breath left at the end of the run and if you happened to make the SCT. You will also hear that NADAC dogs have to have extreme distance skills. That is probably true if you want to get qualifying runs in Elite Chances. However, if you are just building your distance skills, there are easier options such as competing at the Intro or Novice level with less extreme distance demands. I also have it on good authority that no mines have been laid beyond the gamble line and that the only penalty for stepping in to support/train your dog is an NQ on the run—the horror of it!

Speaking of training, remember that one real benefit of NADAC is the ability to train in the ring. On any run, you can train (redo) any one obstacle (or situation such as a start line stay). You will get an E for the run, but you can reinforce the correct performance and complete the course feeling that something has gone well out there. It is the sort of training opportunity that people want and need but cannot do in most other agility venues. An actual training opportunity in a real trial setting is well worth the price of the run. At this point, virtually all of Wryly's NADAC runs are training runs as we learn to work together in the ring as a team. If things sometimes go wrong in the ring and you would love a "do over", consider running some NADAC.

Oh, by the way, if you and your dog are happy competing at a less difficult level in any class, there are no "move up" requirements in NADAC—stay where you and your dog are comfortable for as long as you want (as long as you want can be forever), or, as I have done with Farley, move your "on his way to retirement" dog back to a lower level—it is all OK to do in NADAC. Your older dog still likes to compete, but would be really happy if he never saw another weave pole in his life—run in Touch and Go instead of Regular—the Dog Walk and A-Frame are there, but not a weave pole to be seen. Lots of choices out there and some of the choices may be right for your dog.

Finally, from my experience in New England and New York, there are no friendlier, more easy going competitors than those who regularly show up at NADAC trials. The vast majority of those present are just out doing what they love to do with their dog. They are more apt to be dressed in jeans and tie dye (purple tie dye predominantly) then spandex, and they do not aspire to be World Team competitors, but are friendly, supportive and encouraging to others. I am venturing down to a NADAC trial in Georgia next month on route to a CPE judging assignment in Florida and I am hoping that I find the NADAC competitors in Georgia to be like the NADAC competitors I know in the Northeast. Consider giving NADAC a try when you have a chance!

NOTICE FROM BEACON FOR HEALTH

Elsa Sell, BeaCon

Genetic Diversity of the US Bearded Collie. In this just completed study, pedigrees of AKC Stud book Bearded Collies from 1997 to 2015 were analyzed by Dr. Jerry Bell. There were 22 founders (unknown ancestry) from the 60's and 2 additional by 1980. The analysis identified the most influential founders and early ancestors who represent the original genetic potential in the population.

The number of DIFFERENT breeding offspring is what that affects the percentage of founder genes that are actually passed on to the population. Over time, breeder selection in both the UK and the US has favored lines of descent from some founders over those of others. A few founders have no living descendants and thus, their contribution has been loss. The types of matings between individual dogs in a breed (outbreeding versus linebreeding) have no effect on the breed's genetic diversity. Rather, it is the selection of individuals used for breeding.

The stud book population expanded and peaked in the 1980s at 1,434 new dogs, then started to decline. The diminishing number of breeding dogs and registrations since the 1980s has occurred with most other breeds. With some breeds it was a reflection of the economy in the 1980s and 1990s. For many breeds this trend has reversed and the number of registrations has increased in recent years. However, the Bearded Collie population's significant decline began around 2001 and has progressed relatively unabated to the present time. The cause of the decline in Bearded Collie breeding cannot be determined by this analysis.

Despite the population decline, the breed in the US has sufficient genetic diversity to remain viable if the population recovers in size. This involves recruitment of new generations of breeders as well as continued effort by established breeders.

The full report by Dr. Bell and a lay summary by C. A. Sharp can be read on the BeaCon website - www.beaconforhealth.org

Blood samples needed: The technique used for whole genome sequencing (WGS) requires fresh blood samples for DNA extraction. If you have a Bearded Collie who meets any of the health criteria below, please contact us for further instruction to submit a sample to the laboratory.

If you have previously submitted a dog's sample to the study (buccal or blood) and this dog meets any of the below health criteria, you may resubmit that dog's sample. Find the questionnaire to accompany samples at http://cgap.ucdavis.edu/CGAPAddisonsBloodCollectionForm.pdf.

HEALTH CRITERIA AND NUMBER OF DOGS NEEDED:

1. Confirmed primary Addison's cases diagnosed by ACTH stimulation test with vet records/bloodwork results, diagnosed between 2-6 years old, no corticosteroid use at least 6 months prior to Addison's diagnosis, and no other concurrent health issues including any other immune disease such as SLO, hypothyroidism, immune mediated hemolytic anemia, etc. Number needed - 10
2. Healthy Bearded Collies over the age of 10 years with no health issues either confirmed or suspected. These healthy dogs will serve as controls for both SLO and Addison's cases. Number needed – 10 at least
3. Confirmed SLO cases diagnosed by a veterinarian based on clinical findings and/or biopsy (with vet records) and no other health issues either confirmed or suspected, including any other immune disease such as Addison's, hypothyroidism, immune mediated hemolytic anemia, etc. Number needed – as many as possible
4. Other Criteria. From the US. Reason is to insure rapid handling of blood samples and shipment.

SAMPLE COLLECTION AND SHIPMENT:

1. Shipment of samples will be prepaid by the research laboratory. Contact research assistant, Janelle Belanger jmbelanger@ucdavis.edu, for instructions on sample collection, health questionnaires and FedEx shipping account information. Note: We are unable to reimburse for costs associated with the blood draw and shipping paid for by the owner or veterinarian cannot be reimbursed.

   a. Sample Collection: If the blood sample cannot be shipped right away (within 1-2 days), it should remain I the refrigerator, not the freezer until shipment. We need 2-3cc (ml) of blood minimum (purple top EDTA tube). The blood sample tube(s) should be labeled with the dog's name, owner last name and date, and shipped on ice packs (a box with a Styrofoam insert works well). Please note that the UC Davis campus does not receive deliveries on weekends or holidays. When the sample is ready for shipment, please send the FedEx tracking # to jmbelanger@ucdavis.edu

   b. Shipping Address:

   Oberbauer Laboratory
   Attn: Janelle Belanger
   Canine Genetic Analysis Project
   Department of Animal Science
   University of California
   2251 Meyer Hall
   One Shields Avenue

   Phone # (required by FedEx): 530-752-1046

2. Blood draw expenses.

a. If your veterinarian charges for this and you need assistance, BeaCon will reimburse your cost. Arrangements have been made for a third party to manage the payments to keep full confidentiality of study participants.

b. Obtain a copy of the bill that shows itemized cost for blood draw.

c. Write on the bill that the charge is for Addison's/SLO research at UC Davis

d. Email a scanned copy of the bill or snail mail the hard copy bill to:
