NW SHEEP CAMP, AUGUST 2022

Deb Thomas

Pam Harris & Nike, Chris Perales & Archie, Wanda Packard & Finn, Michelle Wiley & Fritz, Deb Thomas & Ivy, Sharon Prassa & Mae, Emily Johnson, David Robinson & Paul

If you really want to get good at something, nothing is better than several days of total immersion. Fido Farms offers small group 3 day sheep camps during the summer. 10-12 people with two instructors. We were able to fill our group with mainly Beardies, 8 people with 7 Beardies and were joined by 4 more people with different breeds. We were divided into two groups, based on dog and handler experience and working level.

Our two very knowledgeable instructors, Corinne Berg and Kent Bradly, have many years of experience working with various breeds and competing at the top levels. They offered slightly different approaches and insights, but were very compatible. A group worked with one instructor in the morning and the other in the afternoon. Dog/handlers were worked twice in the morning and twice in the afternoon with the lesson tailored to their level and what the handler or the instructor felt they needed to work on.

Kent really emphasized staying calm - no matter how much things felt out of control - sheep running, dog running... human needed to stay calm. I really appreciated his philosophy. We are training STOCK dogs, stock is the center, taking care of stock is the center. It's easy at times, to see the sheep as a problem!

Sharon Prassa working Mae. Nice quiet and relaxed.

He had a great exercise to work on flanks, remembering that a flank should not move stock - it simply moves the dog. Stock behind you, dog in front of you. Now imagine you are standing on an arc and the dog is on an arc farther out. Dog is given flank commands, Away and Go Bye. Handler moves along the arc, making sure the dog stays the same distance off the stock as both of you move back and forth on the arc. Handler doesn't move toward the dog or away from the dog - stays on the arc. Now when things are nice and quiet, handler allows the dog to move toward the sheep, as the handler backs up and the dog fetches them - the reward for the dog.

Michelle Wiley working Fritz with Kent Bradly. Square flank - dog moves on an arc without moving closer to the sheep.

Paul, owned by Emily Johnson and David Robinson, Nice deep outrun, lift and fetch.

Wanda Packard's boy Fin. A nice lift.

Kent and Corinne both discussed the handler's position in relationship to the dog's body. Handler's pressure should be at the shoulder - too far forward and you either stop or turn the dog. Too far back and you speed the dog up.

With Corinne I worked on driving. Something I'm doing differently with my young dog is introducing driving very early in training. We also worked on Outrun and lifts off a person with a dog. Many dogs were either intimidated or distracted by another dog in the field and it isn't uncommon to need that skill.

Ivy and Deb Thomas, working on the bubble. Sheep aren't pushing past the handler because the dog isn't pushing too much into their bubble.

*Pam Harris with Nike and Kent Bradley.
The Sidel (working equipment) is in the background.*

Sheep camp is an excellent way to spend the day concentrating on only one thing - getting better at working stock dogs. It was so much more fun to have our camp full of so many wonderful Beardies and good friends. Even starting at 6 am to beat the heat, was OK with Beardie friends.

Michele's Observations: This year's Sheep Camp did not disappoint. I came home with new skills I learned and practiced during those three days.

I arrived thinking I needed more power to get my dog to respect me but learned what I needed was the right communication skills in order to be a better partner for my dog.

Kent showed me how to better use my shoulders to "open" the pathway for the direction of the flank I wanted and not inadvertently block it. Also, where to position myself in relation to the dog and sheep so I can use my pressure to get a nice square flank and discourage slicing in.

Corrine helped to reinforce those skills by having me be quicker at rewarding when the dog was right and correcting when he wasn't. The sheep are the reward. Nice, thoughtful work earns more movement but not taking a sit means we pause until we get the sit.

I got to apply lessons learned from both instructors on AKC A course obstacles and see how far we'd progressed in a few days. I've always thought my stock stick gave me power but discovered I didn't need it and I communicate much more successfully without it.

Wanda Packard: I always love herding camp. We had a great group of Beardies and two really good trainers. Very different styles, but effective. It is always good to get a new perspective on working with my dog. Had a great time and looking forward to next year.

Pam Harris: I want to thank the beardie community, ( Deb Thomas and Sharon Prassa), Fido's Farm and instructors Corinne and Kent. I had been looking forward to this weekend for a long time and even though short for me I was not disappointed. The biggest takeaways from my one day were knowledge and expertise by the instructors as well as kindness and caring for the sheep, dogs and students! If you have a chance, I highly recommend attending one of these Mini sheep camps!

Emily Johnson and David Robinson: We are fairly new to herding and Paul is our first Bearded Collie. The sheep mini camps have been an invaluable resource for us because it allows us to really take the time to practice the art of herding and deepen our relationship with our dog. We like that we are working in different spaces and different instructors and different sheep from our usual training sessions. It has been a joy to see how much the three of us have improved since last years' camp and we look forward to the next one.

Sharon Prassa: The first thing I learned about sheep camp (and any seminar for that matter) is to work to your dog's mental state on that day. Mae and I ended up doing lots of pen work, getting sheep out of tight spaces, and driving. She was totally not willing to work in a largish (course A size) field during camp but was happy to do farm work. So, it turned out to be a great camp for us.

Deb Thomas: The other salient piece of information was how to use your body position to influence the dog's position in relation to the sheep, for flanks as well as stops. It's always so fun to see these concepts actually work! The dog, somehow, reads what you are asking it to do. It's kind of like magic.
