PRACTICING AT HOME

Even if you don't have enough space to put up full courses, you can still make training progress at home if you have some equipment. If your goal is to reach the Masters level, at a minimum, you should have a set of 12 weave poles (preferably channel poles), 4 jumps (at least two with wings) and a tunnel...even a 10 foot tunnel is useful if that's all you have space for. And if you can squeeze in a contact, I would suggest the seesaw but even a plank or a portable contact trainer can fill in for full size contacts. A single jump can be used to practice front and rear crosses and backsides. Doing these kind of exercises with a tunnel in the background is a very good way to accustom your beardie to ignoring the tunnel except when you want him/her to take it! Most Open/Master level courses have some sort of tunnel discrimination on them these days so this is a mandatory skill to have.

The setup shown here provides several kinds of training opportunities. Here are a number of patterns to try:

- 1A, 3, 2D...a simple loop...jump tunnel jump
- 1A, 2D...a 180 degree turn, ignoring the tunnel
- 1A, 4, 2D...another tunnel loop but taking the non-obvious end
- 1A, 2C...a threadle, ignoring the tunnel
- 2C, 1A, 3...a threadle in the opposite direction to the tunnel
- 1A, 3, 2D, 4...a wrap back to the tunnel
- 2C, 3, 1A, 2D...send to the far end of the tunnel, backside of 1 to 2 ignoring the tunnel

These exercises can be made more difficult by moving the tunnel closer to the jumps and/or decreasing the distance between the jumps. Try to alternate between taking the tunnel and not taking the tunnel. Happy training until next month!

LIFE ON THE FARM: BISSII THE COW DOG AND CADILLAC COWBOY

Laurie Lo

FIRST NOTES

Two Meat Cows in our pasture.
Don't know where they came from.
Looking for owners. Contacted Lincoln County Dispatch.
They will probably spend the night here. Hopefully, someone will get them in the morning. They can jump our fence. They've already trashed one fence.

MORE

Who would have thought? For the past two days we have been visited by two beef cattle that are on the lamb (ha ha ha). Their first visit was Saturday night. It was too late to do much, so we put them in the closest-to-the-barn grazing paddock. I found the owner via the internet. I told him to call me in the morning to ascertain that the beef steaks were still here.

The next morning, the Beef Steaks were still in the grazing paddock. The owner contacted me and I told him where we lived. Within an hour, he drove up in his Cadillac Escalade, horse trailer in tow. I thought, "this doesn't look too good." And I was right. The guy had absolutely no livestock sense. He had bought the cattle when they were 3 months old, with the intention of growing them out and putting them in the freezer.

After two hours of the Cadillac Cowboy and my husband Kurt Rupe trying to corral the beef steaks, my husband figured out a way to get them from the barnyard, through the corridor along the barn, and into the horse trailer. It worked like a charm until the Beef Steaks blasted through the unlocked side door. (Ed Note: CC is not the first person to leave a trailer side door unlocked!)

That night Helen and Booger came back. They slept near the barn. In the morning (today), Kurt went to see if he could move them into the barnyard. They had other plans. They turned around and jumped the fence. Around noon (today), the Beef Steaks returned. This time Kurt and I managed to cajole them into the corridor and into the barnyard. Kurt snuck around to lock the gate behind them. Amazingly enough, the beef steaks went into the Zebu's living quarters. So, Kurt locked the gate to the Zebu area. TRAPPED!

And where were the Zebu and the sheep? In the pasture one over. Ren (one of the Zebu) became incredibly upset and started screaming. Stimpie ran over to the fence between the two areas and let the intruders know how UNwelcomed they were. It didn't take long for the beef steaks to jump out of the Zebu area and into the pasture with the Zebu and the sheep. Oh CRAP!

Little 250 pound Ren decided to challenge Helen (1000 pounds plus?), the bigger beef cow. Nose to nose and toes to toes. It was a draw. But as Ren backed away, Stimpie tried to gore Booger on the side with his big ass horns (the beef steaks have no horns).

I called to Bissii, who is always ready to go see his sheep friends. We walked out of the house. I grabbed my thirty-foot long line and put on my gloves (see, I do learn my lessons every once in a while). Slowly we walked to the barn, through the barn, down the corridor, across the barnyard (size of an A-course field) and to the side pasture. You'd think we'd be in a hurry. But to make this a successful enterprise, we had to keep our cool and our brains in our heads.

All the livestock were looking at Team Bissii as we entered the pasture. As we started to circle around the sheep, they moved away from us, through the gate and into the barnyard. Yippie! They moved all the way to the barn. But the two Beef Steaks and the two Zebu were hanging back. How to separate them?

Well, here's when all that stuff that you learn in herding camp comes in handy. The Beef Steaks were side by side. The Zebu were side by side. There was a 15 ft. space between them. Alrighty now! Bissii and I calmly walked in between the two warring factions. The Zebu split off to the right. We continued to put pressure on the Zebu in order to move them toward the sheep. In herding terms, this is called a SHED. Bissii and I drove the Zebu to the sheep. Then we pushed them into the Zebu enclosure and shut the gate.

Now we had to do something with the Beef Steaks. I thought it might be best to put Helen and Booger in our large center pasture. It borders the grazing pasture, but NOT the barnyard or the Zebu enclosure. Bissii and I started driving the Beef Steaks back down the barnyard and into the grazing pasture. I closed the gate. Then Bissii and I went ahead and opened up the two gates that we have (top and bottom) to the center pasture. I like to keep all options open when doing dangerous stuff like this. (Those Beef Steaks are really big and can do serious damage to living creatures such as Bissii and myself).

We tried driving Helen and Booger into the top gate, but they refused to go through. Maybe they couldn't see it. So, we concentrated on getting them through the other gate. It took us a while and we had a few misses. But sluggish persistence paid off. The Beef Steaks are now eating all of our grass in the center pasture. The Cadillac Cowboy will be here in the afternoon to get his Beef Steaks. Well, I hope he can get the Beef Steaks. Ren and Stimpie (the Zebus) hate the gigantic imposters. The sheep don't seem to care, one way or another.

P.S. I am so proud of Bissii. He handled the pressure like a veteran. Not a surprise, considering that he is a Koehler trained dog. (Ed note: some Beardies really do enjoy working cattle; it seems more intuitive than sheep to them.)

To be continued in June.
