AKC'S NEW YORK CITY "MEET THE BREEDS"

Bob Lamm (Garden State Bearded Collie Club) needs volunteers to man the AKC's Meet The Breeds both, January 27-28. So far there are only two volunteers. If you are able to participate and bring your beardie, contact Bob at bob@raintreebeardedcollies.com

The Board agreed to cover some reasonable expenses for participants.

HERDING CLINICS – AN EXCELLENT PLACE TO PROBLEM SOLVE

Jack Szalka

We have all been there. You and/or your dog have been having issues with a certain behavior at herding trials or general farm work. A good handler will take into consideration that the issue may not be the dog's fault entirely. Teamwork requires good timing, trust, execution of commands and cooperative livestock. When things go bad, assess the situation, and determine what you need to work on to improve your performance. This is where herding clinics are beneficial. A good clinician will help you to identify and work through your issues (whether it's you or your dog or both). Have a goal in mind for the clinic and explain your problem to the clinician. Even better, try to duplicate the situation at the clinic so the clinician can observe both you and your dog's behavior and reaction to determine the cause and solution.

For example, where we train, on the A course the sheep are drawn to the exhaust pen gate area along the top of the course. Once the sheep exit the Z and head toward the runway panel/hold pen, they really pick up speed. Bowie had this figured out

The mission of the Bearded Collie Club of America is to protect the long-term welfare of the breed by providing a variety of opportunities for Beardie owners, breeders, and the general public to learn, connect, and compete, while supporting research into breed-specific health issues and rescuing Beardies in need.

early on and has a strong desire to cover. He would begin to anticipate the sheep attempting to escape while they were still in the middle of the Z. Bowie would quickly run to the cross-drive area and wait. It didn't matter if the gate was closed for a hold pen or open for a runaway. At this point I had two choices. One, to let him cover and bring the sheep to him (if they stayed around the 3). Or if he created a runaway, to have him try and cover, which generally ended up with a very messy cross drive.

Fortunately, Cappy Pruett comes to Michigan at least four times a year, and one of the clinic sites is where we train. We attended a clinic held the first week of December, which was also the muddiest weekend of the year, but that's another story. We have worked with Cappy in the past, so he is familiar with me and Bowie. We had worked through an earlier issue where Bowie would become frustrated and dive in on the sheep creating splits and general chaos. Most of that was my fault since I was trying to micromanage. In addition, I did not praise him when he was doing a good job.

At this most recent clinic I worked on Bowie's problem - he would start to think about covering while the sheep were still in the Z. Cappy had an idea to solve this problem. He had me bring the sheep along the fence line and through the Y. We continued to the Z but when the sheep were exiting the Z he had me step toward the 3 and begin a slight move toward the runway to give Bowie room behind the sheep. Then I gave him an away command. As soon as he did a beautiful flank, I turned back straight across and back towards the Y. The idea was to get him to watch his sheep and not anticipate a run toward the top of the field (the natural draw). It was messy at first, but when my timing was correct and he didn't slice in, it worked perfectly. The sheep would turn back across the field to the Y and I could repeat the exercise. Cappy left me with the reminder to work on this just a few times so as to not create a new expectation. Last week, we were at the farm to replicate our lesson and it went off as planned. Sure enough, on the third run through, Bowie was expecting me to go across. Instead, I proceeded down to the cross drive. I was pleased that now he did not anticipate a run to the draw and parallel drove the sheep to the 4 and held them to allow a nice turn and across to the 5.

don't like to do course specific training, instead I try to do different tasks each time I go to the farm. However, I have been struggling with this issue for quite a while and getting frustrated. My frustration was causing stress for both of us.

I enjoy clinics and have been doing them regularly with Cappy. He knows me and my dogs, including our weaknesses and herding style. We always have a brief discussion on day one of the clinic to determine where we are and what we need to work on. Cappy has an interesting approach. He will have you go to the field and tell you what to do and where to go but won't really explain the details on why and what for until day two. I know with me, if I immediately knew what we were trying to do, I would over think it and try to be perfect and get frustrated. But by letting it happen and hearing his verbal corrections while working, allows me to just work. I can generally figure out his plan but find when he explains it in detail on day two it becomes very clear.

Every clinician will have different ideas and thoughts so find your favorite and try to be a regular. What I find well worth the time is watching others work and see what they are doing to fix the issues they are experiencing. You can compare notes and ideas, ask questions after each person's session, and pick up a few tricks that will work for you as well.

2023 AKC INVITATIONALS

The Agility Invitionals were held in Orlando, FL, December 15-17 at the Orange County Convention Center. All the competitions (agility, obedience, conformation and dock diving) along with the crating and grooming space required for the thousands of dogs entered in these events were all in one HUGE room; one of the security guards told me that the building encompassed 20 acres around one roof! It was both an exhilarating and exhausting experience.

The highlight of the competition for me was the opportunity to see breeds doing agility that are not commonly seen at our local trials, from Bulldogs to Great Danes!

Eukanuba provided pink blankets as exhibitor gifts for all of the agility entries. Saturday, we arrived to find the crating area a sea of pink.

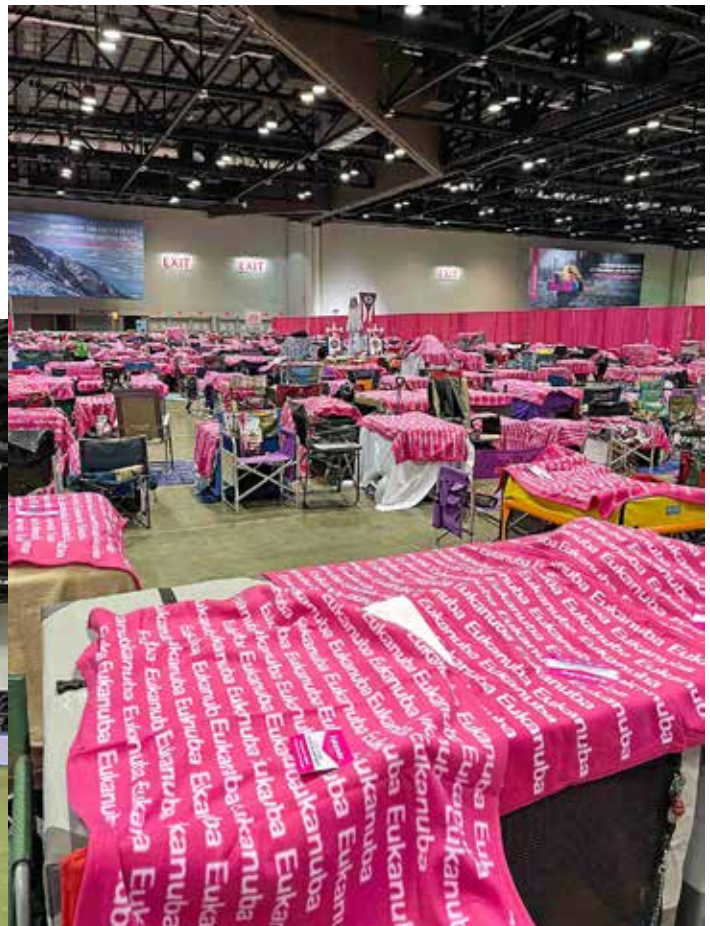

Six beardedies were entered but only four of us showed, Larry Dalan with Ash and Bing, Lori Weinberg with Spark and Truman and me. This was Truman's first trip to this competition.

Friday, we had our warmup Time2Beat run to try out the ring surface and equipment. Saturday was a round of Jumpers With Weaves and Standard. Sunday was the Hybrid round (a bit like Time2Beat) and another round of JWW. Sunday evening was the final standard round for the top teams in each jump height. The number of teams allowed in finals was based on the size of the entry. Ten were chosen for 20 inches. Unfortunately, no beardedie team made finals this year although (I believe) Larry and Bing had four clear rounds in the preliminaries and therefore won the breed medallion offered by the BCCA. Here's a link to video of Bing's hybrid run:

TRAINING AT HOME

Joanne Williamson • balgrae@ix.netcom.com

My New Year's resolution for 2024 is to keep a digital training journal for Truman. The instructor I have been doing in-person training with for a number of years has decided not to give any more lessons/classes so I am left pretty much to my own resources. I am lucky in that I have plenty of space and equipment to build full courses at home. I will use the journal to track the courses I choose to build and record what handling proved successful on them. If I am really ambitious, I will also record what happened on our trial courses. I will likely be showing Truman less in 2024 both to take up some new activities with him and to spend more time training Allie so it should be useful to have notes on what agility activities I do manage with Truman. Here are the first three entries for the New Year.

2024 Training Journal: Truman

-1 January 2024

Bad Dog Agility Academy, 2nd December Exercise Set
Training Field

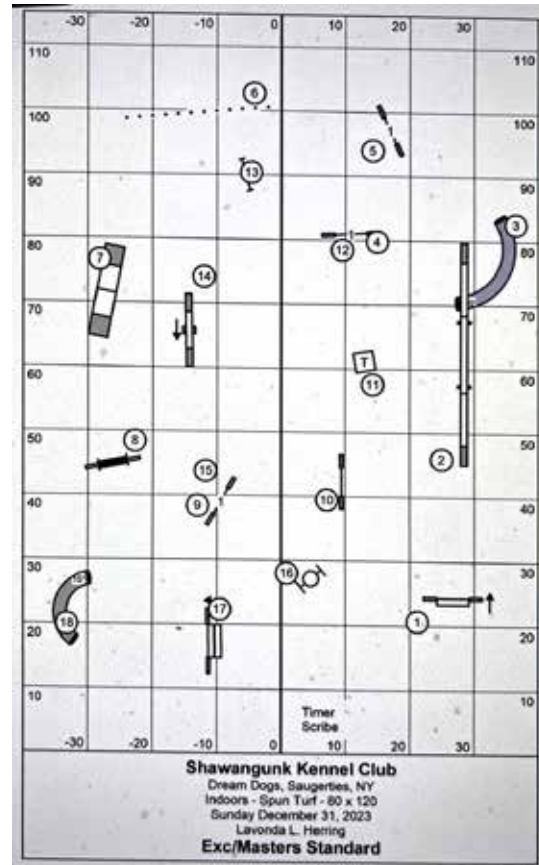

Worked and videoed our training session to submit for critique. All exercises went pretty well.

-3 January 2024

Herring Premier Course (31 Dec 2023; Shawangunk KC)
Training Field

Tried several options for 3-5, 12-17. Main problem was getting to where I needed to be to be clear to Truman on what I wanted. This is what worked.
