2019 OBEDIENCE NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP QUALIFIERS

Qualification for the obedience national championships is based on the total number of OTCH (obedience trial championship) points earned during the qualifying period. Two beardies have earned invitations.

VERSATILITY NEWS

Joanne Williamson

If anyone is contemplating going after a Rally Championship to qualify for a Masters in Versatility, AKC has just announced some changes in the rules (effective February 1, 2019) which should make this title less of an expense to obtain.

First, once a dog has finished his RE, he/she can compete for triple qualifiers (qualify in Advanced B, Excellent B, and Master on the same day) immediately. Since 10 legs are required to get

2018 AKC AGILITY INVITATIONAL

Lori Weinberg

Blade and I had the honor of being one of six Bearded Collie teams that received a prized invite to attend the AKC Agility Invitational. The event was held at the Orange County Convention Center in Orlando Florida. Over a six-day period you can see a variety of events all under one roof including the AKC Agility Invitational, AKC National Championship, Obedience Classic, NADD/AKC Diving Dogs, AKC Junior Agility, AKC Junior Classic – Obedience and Rally.

This was my seventh time in the Invitational and it continues to be one of my favorite events to participate in. I love seeing all the breeds that are at the top of their game. It truly is a great venue to celebrate what each of these top teams have accomplished.

This year had special significance for Blade, as it will be his last run at the 20" height class. In May Blade completed his MACH9 and I moved him to the preferred class. As Blade nears 11 years old his times have slowed slightly but he still runs with ease and joy. Because he qualified for the Invitational at his regular height class he competed at that height. So, a few weeks before traveling to Orlando, I moved him back to the regular class just to get our timing back together. In typical fashion Blade did not drop a beat and he was ready to go!

The six Bearded Collie and handlers in attendance were Debbie Alexander and McKenzie Larry Dalan and Bing Jeff Ipser and Rezoom (handled by Kim Wolfe) Jan Leverenz and Smitty Jennifer Phillips and Ryan Lori Weinberg (me) and Blade

The first day we ran JWW and Standard. Blade was clean in both rounds and had good times. Day two in the Hybrid run I was early on my rear cross cue and Blade flipped away from the correct jump that gave us a refusal, which was a five-point deduction. That error took us out of the running for the finals. Our fourth run was JWW and was clean.

There were 137 dogs entered in the 20" class. Only one dog from a breed can make it into the finals. Typically, you need four clean runs with fast times to make it into the final round. After three rounds all the Bearded Collies had faulted. By the end there were 26 dogs with four clean runs, so there was no Bearded Collie in the finals this year.

The 2018 Invitational is now in the books. Blade ran great, had great times, and was very competitive in his class. It was a great way to close out his career in the regular classes.

Please complete the survey by January 31st. Results will be made available to the membership. Thank you for your time!

HERDING: CHANGING ENVIRONMENT

Elsa Sell • beaconbb@bellsouth.net

Since no one else has submitted an article for our herding news, you have my input once again. The backdrop is naturally how did it go in the last trial? That's a good start. Our club's last trial was December 29 & 30; it came after a long two months of RAIN! You would have thought you lived in the Northwest, given the regular downpours about every weekend – 7.5" November and 7.8" December (and some of that on the trial weekend). We've not had that much rain in Nov/Dec for four years. Even before those two months, the whole year was spectacularly wet.

Now to training. This isn't easy in the south's summers given the heat (and rains); so, work really began in earnest in mid-October before an early November vacation and before RAIN. The goal was for dog (Heidi) to yield a bit and have us work as a team on this herding activity. Now why would I be working on this with a dog who is in middle age? Because I unknowingly in the very earliest training day let her CHASE (the trainer let this happen too in the view that to "work" was a good thing – in retrospect that work was chase). Trust me, it is advisable to avoid the dog (a wise Beardie in this case) ever figuring out what CHASE of stock means; if you don't, you will spend a lot of time reprogramming the dog's neural circuits.

I managed a hint of achieving partnership here at home. Goodness it surely is hard to explain to the sweet, full of expression Beardie face, that yes – you, the person, are in control. Surely some others of our herding community have had this happen??? As the days progressed, there was considerable improvement in word understanding - lie downs (emphasis on down) really meaning lie down and stay there until I request another move. We also continued work on flanking, sometimes with my back to her and on the out (helped with reinforcement of a driving whip with tip on ground); and outruns usually a little longer than the trial arena – just for good measure. Some work was done with me sitting in a chair, asking for lie down or a walk up and then lie down as soon as stock moved away; then LONG lie down, never mind if the ducks are milling around or walking way. This is indeed a LIE DOWN.

Even so, a big problem remained – the dog's reaching the tipping point of brain off, caused by getting in too close to the stock (ducks – I got rid of our sheep in acknowledgment that I preferred to not have my four lower extremity artificial joints whacked). Most of you have been there – namely, seen the dog's hearing neural circuit shut down. No command is audible to dog. So, dog flosses a few feathers, runs through the blue Swedes, and leaves you fuming.

For guidance we either go the two-hour drive (one way) to our trainer of many years (two visits since the May trial) or have a person close by come visit our farm and we with our stock. With all the effort, there was progress. Now we go to the trial which is filled (mostly with border collies) and that is good for the club. Heidi hates motels and noise associations, so by Saturday a.m. she is not eating and unhappy. Arrival at the farm perks her up a lot; she does proper lie downs as we go in gate and when I stop to take off lead, and she goes nicely to cone. It is rather downhill from there though our group of ducks wasn't appealing in the start basket – one white, one sort-of runner, three Khakis. I was able to help since this was started level but to no avail – this happened both days unfortunately. I scribed for judges in A course sheep – lots of runs – and learned plenty.

All the while, I was wondering - what is the missing piece of this puzzle? I had identified the problems, worked on them, and was seeing a lot of improvements. I knew I couldn't replicate the motel dislike because we don't compete other than in herding, and we don't travel with dogs for vacation. What else was missing? Was she really willing to cooperate in the partnership? I suspect yes to the last question, but it was superseded by the neuronal circuit activated by the CHASE motive.

I found at least a partial answer today – a week after the trial. Rather than have the local trainer person come to our farm, I went to the small farm where she rents. Stopped car, opened back, Heidi looked around and was clearly thinking – where is this? The farm wife came out to meet, we shook hands and chatted, then got Heidi out when the trainer came round to the car. Heidi barked at her (normal response is wiggles, hugs, joy). Aha – new setting! Yep, you now can guess where I'm headed. The farm set up has very good arrangements with small, medium, larger fenced in areas for safe containment of dogs or livestock. We gradually went through spaces, greeted farm husband, chatted a bit, then went into another fenced area that contained a nice sized round pen (and ducks). Farm owners were working on something that involved sawing wood and a mechanical stapler. I forgot to mention earlier that Heidi does not like sudden LOUD SOUNDS. Now there is a perfect storm – loud unexpected sound, strange place, strange ducks – a total shut down ensued.

We went into the round pen. Heidi could have cared less that ducks were within feet. She went slinking around, occasionally showing a minimal stock interest – vastly unlike her CHASE mode in more familiar settings. And these ducks were perfect – they fetched, came off the fence, and invited a satisfactory herding experience. In time we left the round pen for shade and some water without much herding done. The automatic stapler was no longer in use so that noise was gone.

Heidi spied chickens walking on the other side of the paddock fence, went to check them out, then returned to the little shady area for water. Very nearby was a small dog plastic dog crate – with three more ducks who were walking around inside. Suddenly Heidi alerted to the crate, decided it was time for a duck visit and the brain circuits switched to herding rather than worry. She was on. The new ducks in crate were carried into the round pen. Heidi was alert and watching crate. Off came long line. Trainer said open the crate now? YEP. UMM – ducks says Heidi. After a run through, we had two duck groups not willing to be together – but a dog who was turned on and incredibly motivated. She had two very satisfactory short work sessions. She made good and sometimes successful efforts to keep the two groups together, she responded appropriately after corrections on getting too close, had beautiful square flanks, stopped on command, and was a totally different from the first session. I noticed too that all these ducks were much quieter and more peaceful than the blue Swedes at home.

Had I not gone to a novel place with calmer better trained ducks for a training session, I would not have realized the importance for this particular dog. Hopefully, this will be helpful to one other among us who herds with their sweet Beardie.
