POPPET'S RETIREMENT!

Trudy Wisner

February 2019 Westminster masters agility championship. It's always difficult to decide when is the right time to retire an Agility dog. I have been extremely lucky with Poppet who never had an injury. Probably because being a groomer, I have to work on Saturday's so Sunday is my only day to trial. We live in New York City, so I don't have a backyard full of equipment. Maybe less wear and tear? Whatever the reasons we have been fortunate to have such a long Agility career. After she earned her Mach I moved her down to preferred hoping to extend her career. She loved running 16" so much so that she earned her Pach at age 11. She was still having so much fun and placing in the classes so I kept her going.

In October of 2018 She came over for s butt rub and I found a strange mass in her abdomen. Straight off to the vet. X-ray revealed a mass of the spleen. I was heartbroken. My vet believes I was able to find it so early because of her lean structure being an agility dog. Surgery the very next morning to remove it. She came through with flying colors. Biopsy revealed she did NOT have cancer. My heart was lifted. After a time off to recover she was asking, no demanding to go to class with the other dogs. I brought her along and ran her at 8" just on some jumps and tunnels. Well, she made it quite clear she was coming back. A bit more time to heal and I entered her at a local trial to see if she was up to it. She won both classes but my heart told me she was going to have to retire eventually. I would much rather have her than another title or some ribbons.

Timing worked out that the Westminster agility Trial would be opening in the very near future. What better way to retire than at Westminster? Poppet has made it into every Westminster trial since it started. Her Dad Billy also retired at Westminster at age 12+ with QQ and placements. Standard was up first. Nice course. We can do this! Well we got through all of the hard stuff to have my senior dog miss her dog walk contact! By a lot! She was so happy, barking the whole way around the course. The crowd loved her. Jumpers were later that afternoon. The place was packed! The crowd went wild for her fancy smancy start line stay ... or lack there of. When she hears the "Go" it's game on. I hold her back by the collar and off we go. Crowd was cheering, she was barking, I was crying knowing it was indeed her final run. All was going great till she totally blew me off and went behind me to take an off course tunnel. Being her pushy self I had to laugh. We finished the course, I leashed her up and gave her the biggest hug and kiss.

It's funny, I expected to feel sad but in fact I felt proud. I am lucky to have such an amazing partner for as long as I have. She is now officially retired at age 12 years, 3 months, 3 weeks and 4 days old. We haven't figured out who is going to tell her that she's retired but she will still go to class running at an even lower height just to keep her in shape.

HARDWARE DISEASE

Likely most have never heard of this disease/problem. It is a ruminant animal problem – so, cows, sheep, goats. Ruminants have four stomachs (in order from first to last) – rumen, reticulum, omasum, abomasum. If a piece of metal is ingested, it resides in the reticulum part which catches all heavy objects. Feed and light material pass back to the rumen (first part) for digestion but heavy objects remain in the reticulum. When muscles contract, the heavy metal object in the reticulum may be forced through the wall of the reticulum and into the diaphragm or heart sac.

For some time, one of our farm cows has been walking as if she hurt. Steps were small, sometimes front feet were out in front more than usual, she was often off by herself and didn't move about the pasture as much as others; her back was hunched up some of the time like a person would guard the back with nerve induced back pain. There was no obvious swelling of the legs or joints and she didn't favor one leg when walking. Her heifer calf grew well and was well bonded to mom, so is almost always by her side.

On this week's vet visit for pregnancy test blood draws (test is named Biopryn), I had her watch this cow walk. She said – hmm, it's not in the feet or legs; it is higher up. Once in the working chute, vet did a thorough exam and said – aha, hardware disease. We learned all about it and more than one wants to know. There were no signs of infection so antibiotics were not indicated. The longer the condition has lasted, the less likely is recovery. A simple and basic treatment effort to try – is placement of a magnet in the stomach. It will land first in the rumen and then move to and remain in the reticulum. If the metal object latches on to the magnet, then animal's symptoms will gradually disappear. If not, the cow goes to the sale barn.

This problem is yet another reason to be meticulous about keeping one's pastures or range free of loose metal objects – nails, staples, wire, junk thrown out (like the beer cans that Friday beer sipping guys toss out truck windows).

In addition to the art, there are interactive exhibits which would be fun for children as well as adults. The library is also located upstairs in an easily accessible area, with a comfortable seating,
